II Articles, Book Chapters and Working Papers

NB I have listed, without additional numbering, translations or anthologised versions of previously published articles and book chapters after the original piece, regardless of whether they have been revised or not. I also have not bothered separating out small multiple entries to Encyclopaedia or other reference books, but have listed longer entries under the subsection on book chapters. I have not included book notes or reviews or articles for newspapers such as the TLS and Guardian – some of these are listed under Knowledge Transfer below. Finally, unless they aspire to be a significant substantive contribution in their own right, I have recorded any introductions to collections I edited along with my substantive contribution to the work.

a) Refereed Journal Articles

5. Administration

I am currently the Director of UCL’s European Institute, which I began in 2010 at the initiative of the Vice-Provost Research’s office and with the support of the Provost’s strategic research fund. The European Institute forms part of UCL’s Grand Challenge programme to promote research in the broad area of Intercultural Interactions. It aims to raise the profile and impact of the wide and diverse range of Europe related research at UCL being undertaken by some 250 academics in fields going from Law, Political Science and Economics, through the Arts and Humanities, including History, History of Art, and Modern Languages, to Biomedicine, Architecture, Geography and Environmental Science, and to stimulate collaboration between them. So far we have organised over 30 events a year with bodies ranging from Tate Modern and the British Library, to the European Commission and Parliament, the House of Lords, and the Belgian, Italian, Hungarian, Polish, French and German Embassies and the German, Finnish, Italian and French cultural institutes. In addition, we have produced working papers and briefing papers on various issues from Prisoners Rights and the Eurocrisis to the London Riots and the Future of Multiculturalism. We are on track to covering our operating costs from grant income and matching funds from partners within three years.

From 2005-10 I was the founding Head of the Department of Political Science and Director of the School of Public Policy at UCL. When I arrived in 2005 the School was running an annual deficit of c. £600,000. We went into the black in 2009/10 and the surplus for 2010/11, the first for which we had received Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) (QR) funding, was £2,291,000. Those members of the School entered under Politics in the 2001 RAE received a 3A (out of a maximum of 5). In 2008 we improved significantly and came 6th on GPA out of the 59 UK Politics Departments submitted, 3rd on the basis of the percentage of research graded at the 3* or 4*. During my period as Head I made 10 lectureship and two Chair appointments, increasing the academic staff to 20 and the administrative team to 6. We expanded our teaching to include two new MSc programmes and an affiliate undergraduate degree programme of some 11 courses, which now forms the basis of a Politics Pathway in the existing cross departmental (History, Philosophy, Modern Languages, Law and Economics) BA programme in European Social and Political Studies in 2009/10. The department will introduce a joint MPA with New York University in 2012/13. I prepared our successful ESRC and AHRC recognition bids for all the MSc, MA and PhD programmes, obtaining an ESRC quota award and 5 AHRC block grant awards, and oversaw a five-fold increase in research students, a doubling of Masters students, a four-fold increase of affiliate undergraduate students and a rise of research grant income to almost £4m from 2005-10.

Within UCL I am on the advisory committee for the Research Grand Challenge on Intercultural Interactions and, as noted above, played a lead role in the establishment of a cross UCL European Institute to coordinate interdisciplinary research with a European focus, of which I became the first Director as of 1 August 2010. I was a member of the UCL-Lancet Commission on Climate Change and helped establish the UCL-Commonwealth Secretariat Global Citizenship Lectures. I have delivered numerous Public Lectures for the college on different topics related to UCL's research programme – from the Human Rights Act to Global Governance and Citizenship.

At Essex I was a member of the Department's Research Committee and PhD review panel, but was largely spared administrative duties due to my position as Academic Director of the ECPR (European Consortium for Political Research), for which the department received some compensation from the ECPR. My role in the ECPR is detailed below under External Activities.

I was Head of Department at the University of Reading 1996-2000, Acting Director of the Graduate School 1999-2000, and sat on the Faculty's Policy and Resource, Promotions and Research Steering Committees 1996-2002. The Department was rebuilt over this period, and I was able to make some 8 appointments and replace roughly half the department. I coordinated the 2001 RAE submission, when it went from a `3A' to a `5' (having been a `2' in 1992). It also achieved an `excellent' score for teaching (23) from the QAA. At Reading I obtained ESRC RT recognition for the majority of the Masters (and S for the remainder) and Mode A and CASE recognition for the Doctoral programmes of the Graduate School of European and International Studies – a cross-faculty centre that became part of the Politics Department in 1997. In the 2002 recognition exercise I coordinated the successful application for 1 + 3 FT/PT and CASE recognition for all 9 of the School's programmes.

At UEA I was Head of the Politics sector within the School of Social and Economic Sciences (SOC). At both Edinburgh and UEA I convened the Faculty wide (at UEA School) Graduate programme for the Social Sciences, both of which I was instrumental in setting up and getting Mode A ESRC recognition for. I also established MAs in Political Theory in both institutions.

At Edinburgh, UEA, Reading, UCL and elsewhere I have sat on more appointment committees for all levels from Lecturer to Chair than I can recall.

6. Teaching

I currently teach two MA options on 'Democracy, Citizenship and Constitutions' and 'Theorizing Citizenship and Democracy in the EU' (a Jean Monnet Module), and co- teach (with Jo Wolff in Philosophy) a third MA option on `Public Ethics'. I organise (with Cecile Laborde and Albert Weale) an external speaker series in Legal and Political Theory and the related research training course in Legal and Political Theory (PAL). The Department does not currently teach undergraduates other than affiliate JYA students, but as of 2009/10 it has provided a 'Politics Pathway' within the European Social and Political Studies (ESPS) programme run by the Philosophy and Modern Language departments, and I established and convened (2010-2012) a core unit on `Theories and Concepts of Politics' that was taught by a Teaching Fellow. With Laborde, Valentini and Weale, I also co-run the PhD Theory Workshop.

At Essex I taught two BA courses on 'Democratic Theory' and 'Political Theory Beyond the Nation State'. At Reading, I co-taught and convened (in different years) the following BA options: 'Contemporary Political Thought' (at various times with Andrew Mason, Andrew Williams and Philip Stratton-Lake in Philosophy), 'Democracy' (with Barry Holden), and 'Continental Political Philosophy' (with Jeremy Lester) and contributed to the compulsory second year 'History of Political Thought' unit. I also co-taught an MA unit on `Democracy and Reform in the EU' (with Alex Warleigh), contributed to the MA core units on the `Nature of Governance' and the `Philosophy of Social Science', and convened the Research Methods programme for Politics MA and PhD students. I was also convenor of the MA in Political Theory and Public Ethics, which I established.

At UEA I designed and co-taught with colleagues in Politics, Philosophy and Sociology a first year course 'An Introduction to Social and Political Thought', contributed to the core course of the then European Studies programme run by Edward Acton, and co- taught optional courses (with Colin Davis in History) on 'Western Political Thought' and (with Martin Hollis in Philosophy and Bob Sugden in Economics) on 'Public Choice' and 'Social Explanation' and (with Tim O'Hagan in Philosophy) on 'Contemporary Political Philosophy'. I also contributed to courses on 'Democratic Theory and Practice' (co-taught with John Street) and 'British Politics' (co-taught with John Greenaway) and an MA unit on 'The Philosophy of Social Science'. I helped establish MA programmes in Political Theory and PPE, the latter of which received ESRC quota awards.

At Edinburgh I lectured on the compulsory first year course on 'Political Theory', co-taught (with Richard Gunn) the compulsory third year course 'Social Contract Theory and its Critics: From Hobbes to Sandel' and, co-taught (with John Orr in Sociology) a course on 'Social Theories of Democracy and Revolt' and with Peter France (in French) a course on 'French Political Thought'. With John Holmwood in Sociology I co-taught the Master's and Doctoral research training course on 'The Philosophy of Social Science'.

7. Phd Students and Post-doctoral Fellows

I have supervised 18 PhD students, with 5 on ESRC studentships. All but three (for who there were extenuating circumstances) have successfully completed within 4 years. I have also acted as a temporary supervisor for a number of visiting PhD students from Italy (x3), Denmark (x2), Israel, Belgium, Spain and Germany (x2).

I am currently first supervisor for 3 PhD students, 1 of whom has an AHRC and another an ESRC grant, and am second supervisor for three more.

I have had three externally funded post-doctoral fellows, one funded by the EU Commission's Marie-Curie programme (Dr Claudia Attucci 2007-09), another under the ESRC post-doctoral fellowship scheme (Dr Nidhi Trehan 2008-09), and a third British Academy post-doctoral fellow (Dr Avia Pasternak (2009-10).

8. External Activities

I Professional Service

Academic Director European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR) 2002-06

The ECPR is the second largest professional organisation of political scientists in the world, and by far the largest in Europe. At the time of my involvement, it had over 300 institutional members (of which 40 are outside Europe – the majority in North America but with significant numbers in the Asia-Pacific region) and the active participation of 8000 academics and 3000 graduate students. Its annual budget was around £600,000 and the Central Services employed four full time and three part time staff. The organisation's activities extended from running annual academic meetings across Europe, to the publication of a professional and a scientific journal (which includes the European Political Data Yearbook), book publishing in collaboration with OUP and Routledge and via its own imprint ECPR Press, academic prizes, methods training – both generic and in various substantive areas – through its 10 summer schools, a European wide directory of academics and departments of political science and a web based job market. During my period of office, I initiated ECPR Press, established a Graduate Network, PhD Prize and Conference, successfully put the journal European Political Science out to tender, planned the new journal European Political Science Review and began the eventually successful negotiations with Cambridge University Press to publish it, instituted and organised annual panels on behalf of the ECPR at the American Political Science Association (APSA) conference 2003-06, oversaw the academic programme for the Joint Sessions at Uppsala, Grenada and Nicosia and the General Conference at Budapest, and undertook numerous other tasks related to the running of the ECPR's academic programme. I also coordinated and wrote submissions on behalf of the ECPR regarding the creation of a European Research Area and Council and doctoral training under the Bologna process. Finally, I initiated a more active cooperation with the American Political Science Association (APSA), the International Political Science Association (IPSA) and the recently created Asian Consortium for Political Research (ACPR).

External expert in political theory 2005 for the Social and Political Science panel of the Italian CIVR (their version of the RAE).

Member of the Economic and Social Research Council (ESCR) steering committee for the International Benchmarking of Politics and International Relations 2006-7.

Elected the founding Chair of the Britain and Ireland Association of Political Thought , 2008-14.

International member of the Comitato nazionale per le celebrazioni del Centenario della nascita di Norberto Bobbio

Member of the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) Peer Review College. 2008-12 (Strategic Reviewer 2011-12)

Member of the Evaluation Committee in Social Sciences, ICREA Academia, Barcelona, 2009/10, 2010/11, 2011/12

Member of the Politics and International Relations Panel, UK Research Evaluation Framework (REF) 2014

II Refereeing/Prize Committees

I was on the Jury for the UK Political Studies WJM MacKenzie Book Prize in 2003 and for the Harrison Prize for the best paper in Political Studies in 2005.

I regularly referee for the main British, European and North American journals in my fields, such as BJPS, History of Political Thought, Legal Studies, EJPR, EPSR, JEPP, JCMS, the European Journal of Philosophy, APSR, Political Theory and JoP, amongst others; for the ESRC, the AHRC – for which I was a member of the Peer Review College, the Italian CNR, the Nuffield Foundation and the Leverhulme Trust and the main publishing houses. I have also refereed proposals for the French, German, Norwegian, Luxembourg and European research councils. I turned down an invitation to be a reviewer for the EU FP7 programme.

III Conference Organisation

I organised the annual conferences of the UK Association for Legal and Social Philosophy in 1988 and 1996; co-convened the annual Oxford Political Thought Conference in 1993; and convened the Association for the Study of Modern Italy annual conference in 2000. On behalf of the ECPR, I organised panels at APSA in 2004, 2005 and 2006, the ECPR General Conference in Budapest in 2005 and IPSA in 2006. I was also a workshop director at the ECPR joint sessions in 1991, and a co-director in 2012.

IV Editorships

I am on the editorial board of the British Journal of Politics and International Relations, Modern Italy, Res Publica: A Journal of Legal and Social Philosophy, The European Legacy: Towards New Paradigms, European Political Science, Diacritica: Philosophy, Government and Opposition, the electronic journal 'Queen's Papers on Europeanisation', and the International Editorial Advisory Boards of Iris: European Journal of Philosophy and Public Debate and Serendipities -- Journal for the Sociology and History of the Social Sciences. I was on the board of Modern Intellectual History from 2004-07 and the Journal of Modern Italian Studies 1998-2003. I am an associate editor of the European Journal of Political Theory and the ECPR journal European Political Science Review (EPSR) and have been co-editor of the Critical Review of International and Social Political Philosophy (CRISPP) since Vol 5.1 2002.

I was co-editor of the Pinter/Continuum series 'Political Theory and Contemporary Politics' (1997-2003), overseeing all five books published in this period, an Associate Editor of The Handbook of Political Theory published by Sage and edited a series of articles on `Identity Politics' for the journal Government and Opposition. I was on the founding editorial board of ECPR Press, which I helped establish, from 2002 to 2008, and am on the board of the CUP series Cambridge Studies in European Law and Policy.

V Reviews

Reviews too numerous to list, but I average around three book reviews a year and have written several review articles for the TLS , the American Political Science Review, when it carried them, Political Studies, Journal of Modern Italian Studies, European Legacy, Res Publica, and History of Political Thought, among other places.

VI Invited Conference and Seminar Papers

On average I give around 15 or more invited public lectures, conference key notes and seminar papers a year at different locations around the world (see Appendix 2). Recent seminars over the past four years have included papers at the Universities of Syracuse, Cornell and Princeton in the USA; ARENA, Oslo; the Universities of Hamburg, LUIS in Rome, Palermo, Florence, Frankfurt, Helsinki, Reykjavik and Madrid in Europe, and at Edinburgh, Nuffield College, Oxford, the LSE, Newcastle and Kent in the UK. In this period I have also given Conference Key Notes and Public Lectures at St Andrews, Bremen, Frankfurt, UEA (the Martin Hollis Memorial Lecture), Helsinki, Copenhagen, and Oxford. In 2012 I have given the Plenary Lecture of the Portuguese Political Science Association, the Statute Law Society Lecture, was one of two key note speakers at the Association of Legal and Social Philosophy annual conference in Belfast this June and in May gave a Public Lecture at the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin as part of their lecture series on `Moral Challenges in a Globalizing World: Ethics and Public Policy'.

VII External Examining

I have been an external examiner at Kent (BAs Politics and International Relations), Birkbeck (MAs in Politics), Newcastle (BAs in Politics and International Relations), Essex (MAs in Politics) and UCL (BA in European Studies), Trinity College, Dublin (BA in European Studies) and for Political Theory at Southampton ((BAs and MAs in Politics and International Relations). I have been an external examiner for PhDs at the LSE (x4), Bristol, Southampton, Newcastle (x2), Cambridge, Oxford (x8), Sheffield (Philosophy), Swansea, the EUI in Florence (x8 Politics, x1 History, x1 Law), UEA, Université Libres de Bruxelles, Sydney, La Trobe, Essex (x2) and Copenhagen.

VIII External Assessor

I have acted as an external assessor for Chairs and Readerships or their equivalents at Brunel, Strathclyde, Swansea, Birmingham, Essex, QMW, UEA, Queen's University Belfast, Liverpool, Goldsmith's, Edinburgh, Oxford, McGill, Northwestern, Princeton, Syracuse, University of British Columbia, City University of Hong Kong and Victoria University, New Zealand. I have been an External Expert on promotions in the field of Political Theory in the Government Department at the LSE since 2002 and in the LSE European Institute for European Political Thought since 2010.

9. Current and Prospective Research

My early books on Modern Italian Social Theory: Idology and Politics from Pareto to the Present (Polity and Stanford 1987) and Liberalism and Modern Society: An Historical Argument (Polity and Penn State, 1992) looked at how contemporary social and political concepts and ways of understanding democratic politics were forged during the process of industrialisation and state building of the nineteenth and early twentieth century – work I continued in my contributions to an ESRC funded intellectuals project, and to the Cambridge History of Twentieth Century Political Thought and Lineages of European Citizenship (both of which I co-edited) as well as various articles and book chapters. A number of these essays are now being collected in a volume on Croce, Gramsci, Bobbio and the Italian Political Tradition, to be published by ECPR Press, which complements my earlier collection of essays covering the same period, Rethinking Liberalism (Continuum, 2000/05). Over the past few years, I have turned my attention to exploring whether the assumptions underlying these concepts still hold in today's increasingly complex, plural and globalising societies and polities. I have argued that liberal democracy needs to be rethought in the face of these challenges in a more political manner, which allows for a greater degree of devolved, particularist decision-making and the possibility for negotiating compromises between conflicting values and interests. This approach was sketched out in my book Liberalism and Pluralism: Towards a Politics of Compromise (Routledge, 1999), and developed in my CUP book on Political Constitutionalism: A Republican Defence of the Constitutionality of Democracy (Cambridge, 2007) and the general text Citizenship: A Very Short Introduction (OUP, 2008). Due to the success of Political Constitutionalism, which won the Spitz Prize, I am now writing a general study of Constitutionalism for the Polity Press Key Concepts series.

My research on Europe seeks to extend this argument to the global arena, where it might be thought a political approach would be less plausible. Here I argue that a political constitutionalism remains possible but is best conceived as resulting from the inter-relations of democratic states and the domestication of global issues rather than through global democratic institutions. The reconfiguration of nationhood and statehood represented by the EU makes it a good testing ground for both the diagnostic and prescriptive aspects of my thesis. The results of this research are presented in two co-edited works on EU citizenship and governance, as well as numerous book chapters and articles which I am currently reworking with my co-author on many of them, Dario Castiglione, as a monograph for CUP entitled A European Republic of States?: Cosmopolitanism, Republicanism and International Democracy in the EU, a project for which I have just been awarded a Leverhulme Research Fellowship and a Fellowship at the Hanse-Wissenschaftskolleg (HWK) in Delmenhorst.

As these current projects come to completion, I am in the process of developing a new area of research exploring the role and nature of a public ethic for politicians, public servants and citizens. Much of the recent literature in this area focuses on the ethics of policy and the degree to which a given measure or action promotes rights or utility. However, such end-state evaluations are often controversial and difficult to make. There may be conflicts between different sets of rights or between rights and some public good, for example. Indeed, the knock on effects of particular decisions are often hard to judge. As a result, I propose focussing on the ethics of process and character, such as the methods and procedures followed and the integrity and virtues of the decision makers. Because of disagreements and uncertainty about the results of policies, these cannot be appealed to in order to motivate appropriate political behaviour. Citizens need to treat each other with civility and tolerance and perform civic duties such as paying taxes and voting even when such attitudes might work against their self-interest or it would be easier to free ride on the efforts of others. Politicians are often faced with the problem of `dirty hands', where it is impossible not to commit a wrong from some point of view. Like most of my other recent work, this project blends theoretical concerns, in this case the relevance of virtue ethics for politics, and applies it to concrete policy issues. As with earlier projects in this vein, I plan to develop a number of empirical case studies for which research funding can be obtained – for example, exploring the proliferation of professional codes of ethics. Along with a former PhD student, I have edited four volumes of classic essays in the area of Political Theory and Public Ethics for Ashgate, which together with a recent article in the European Journal of Political Theory on 'Dirty Hands and White Gloves' and my contribution to a jointly edited special issue on `Politics as Compromise' for Government and Opposition represent preliminary studies for this project. I have a book proposal in process on the topic of political leadership within modern democracies provisionally entitled The Democratic Prince, in which the editor for Harvard University Press has expressed a strong interest.

Appendix 1 Selected Reviews of Monographs, Edited Books and Scholarly Editions

I Monographs

Modern Italian Social Theory - Ideology and Politics from Pareto to the Present, (Polity Press, 1987, Stanford University Press, Ca, 1987, translated into Indonesian)

'In the English-speaking world, specialists in modern Italian thought are lamentably few; it is hard to think of anyone, apart from Bellamy, who can write with such authority on such a wide range of Italian theorists … a sound and important book, the fruit of prodigious scholarship and profound reflection.' History of Political Thought (review article)

`Richard Bellamy's range is impressive, his ambition laudable, his subject important and his approach promising … his reconstruction of particular ideas … superb'. American Historical Review

`a complex and challenging work … both welcome and impressive.' British Journal of Sociology (part of a review article)

`this is a good book … Bellamy is at his best in placing the ideas in a wider historical context. In the process he provides the reader with some fascinating insights into the Italian thought that has engendered so many important theoretical innovations.' Social Forces

`a lively, lucid, well-informed and judicious account' Sociological Review

`covers a wide territory … sensibly and with much insight … The placement of Italian social thought in the context of its political and social conditions is the outstanding merit of Bellamy's book.' Ethics

Other reviews include American Journal of Sociology, Journal of Modern History, Italian Studies, Times Literary Supplement, Times Higher Education Supplement, Il Pensiero Politico, European History Quarterly, Critica Storica, and Social Forces

Liberalism and Modern Society: An Historical Argument, (Polity Press and Penn State University Press, 1992, translated into Portuguese and Chinese)

`a fine study … provides rich insights into the fate of ethical liberalism' Ethics

`a valuable analysis of the various strands constitutive of modern liberalism … His well written and clearly organised study … will confirm Bellamy's reputation as an intellectual historian and theorist.' Philosophical Quarterly

'Finely written and deeply researched' Review of Metaphysics

`a very clear, well-documented and useful book … will become one of the basic introductions to the sociology of liberalism and a basic resource for all those who are concerned with reassessing the nature and claims of contemporary democratic thought' British Journal of Sociology

‘Bellamy’s book is highly commendable. His social historical analysis of the evolution of liberalism is a significant contribution to the literature. ... Bellamy′s successful joining of historical exposition of societal / political moralities and structures with analysis of philosophical ideas is impressive.’ Millennium

`meticulously researched and written in a punchy and literate style … an impressive, informative and highly stimulating piece of work’. International Affairs

‘Bellamy’s achievement lies in having provided us with an accomplished overview of liberalism and in locating the really fertile ground for theorizing about it in the historical particularism of its varieties’ Times Literary Supplement

`a tantalizing and courageous book … a challenging [study] of the interplay between ideas, political cultures and institutions’ English Historical Review

`impressive and scholarly … Bellamy is especially good at interrelating theoretical and historical considerations in an illuminating, if sometimes controversial, way.’ Political Studies

`wide ranging, extremely well-informed, and clearly written. It combines acute philosophical criticism with social history, and always clearly sets out the distance of its own conclusions from existing interpretations … The broad scope of Bellamy' s approach and the sustained attention to social and political context are both to be commended.’ Radical Philosophy

Other reviews include West European Politics, History, Political Theory, Capital and Class, Berliner Journal für Soziologie, and Journal of Modern History

(with Darrow Schecter) Gramsci and the Italian State, (Manchester University Press and St Martin's Press, 1993, translated into Japanese)

`a major contribution to the debate over what is living and what is dead in Gramsci’s political thought’ Choice

`a welcome contribution to the English-language literature’ American Historical Review

`The authors offer a useful counterbalance to the existing literature in English through their determination to concentrate on Gramsci's 'national' experience’ English Historical Review

`scholarly and erudite … They succeed in steering our attention away from reading Gramsci simply as a Marxist, and they provide the framework for a richer and more comprehensive evaluation of his ideas’ History of Political Thought

Other reviews include English Historical Review, European History Quarterly, Il Pensiero Politico, Times Higher Education Supplement, Bulletin of the Hegel Society of Great Britain and Italian Studies.

Liberalism and Pluralism: Towards a Politics of Compromise, (Routledge, 1999)

‘his argument is sobering. Will liberalism decimate the pluralism it parents? Bellamy’s approach to this horrendous prospect deserves consideration by both democrats and liberals’ Journal of Politics

`Bellamy argues for "democratic liberalism," a strategy of inclusiveness which strives to achieve a just and stable consensus on a constitutional framework through "negotiated compromise.”’ Ethics

`A strength of the work is its discussion of different forms and strategies of political compromise’ Choice

Review articles in Government and Opposition and Res Publica, other reviews include Acta Politica, and Canadian Journal of Political Science.

Political Constitutionalism: A Republican Defence of the Constitutionality of Democracy, (Cambridge University Press, 2007, translated into Spanish and Chinese)

`an excellent means of exposing brighter law students to high-level political theory and offers a salutary rebuff to lawyers' hubris.’ Times Higher Education

‘The author’s claims are defended by an array of forceful arguments, clearly expounded; and the work provides an impressive overview of current debates over democracy and judicial review … No legal constitutionalist could fail to enjoy the stimulating challenge Bellamy’s new book provides.’ Cambridge Law Journal

‘… broad-ranging and ambitious ... he does the great service of reminding us of the important role that political actions (such as bargaining and compromising) and political institutions (such as political parties and various electoral systems) have to play as (democratic) alternatives to judicial intervention in the upholding of rights.’ Political Studies Review

‘This dense monograph is a timely and very important contribution to contemporary normative debates on democracy … Bellamy’s outstanding contribution is to demonstrate the implications that the principle of non-domination has for understanding the nature and norms of democracy’. European Political Science: Reviews (review article)

`Richard Bellamy has written a powerful critique of judicial review. At the same time, he has offered a serious, sustained defence of unicameral parliamentary supremacy ... the array [of arguments] he marshals is impressive, drawing on political science as well as moral, political, and legal theory ... in his well-researched book ...' International Journal of Constitutional Law (I • CON) (review article)

`a welcome reminder of how effective the politics of democratic opposition, compromise, representation, and so on are at ensuring the preservation of values that Republicans and the liberal tradition both prize.’ Modern Law Review (review article)

`This is a complex and sometimes dense argument, which takes considerable trouble to engage with hard cases and to address potential criticisms. In particular, it constitutes a significant contribution to discussion of the institutional requirements of non-domination.

Even those who disagree with Bellamy's conclusions will be challenged by his arguments, and will benefit from following his close engagement with a comprehensive range of arguments in legal theory and political philosophy, and the way in which evidence from political science is brought to bear on these debates.' Contemporary Political Thought

` sharp, intelligent, and clear. .. The second, affirmative, half of the book, building up an account of competitive and majoritarian democratic politics on questions of principle, oriented toward non-domination, is first rate, one of the best works in democratic theory in recent years.' Perspectives on Politics

Other reviews include University of Toronto Law Journal, Perspectives on Politics (as part of review article), Redescriptions

A Very Short Introduction to Citizenship , (Oxford University Press, 2008, translated into Arabic).

'Citizenship is a vast subject for a short introduction, but Richard Bellamy has risen to the challenge with aplomb … [M]ost academics would have played safe by rehearsing the views of others with a few critical comments. Bellamy has been much bolder … he advances a distinctive and provocative view of citizenship … as 'the right to have rights' … One can only hope that well-argued and highly principled tracts like this will remind governments and voters that citizenship involves duties as well as rights.' Times Literary Supplement

II Edited Books

(editor), Liberalism and Recent Legal and Social Philosophy, (Franz Steiner, 1989) (Also appeared as a special issue of the Archiv für Rechts-und Sozialphilosophie, Beiheft nr. 36, 1989)

Reviews include Politische Vierteljahresschrift

(editor), Victorian Liberalism: Nineteenth Century Political Thought and Practice, (London: Routledge, 1990)

'Richard Bellamy's excellent essay on Green explores his theory of self-realisation and the large part it played in his politics, ethics and metaphysics …. Readers will appreciate the breadth of coverage of Victorian Liberalism offered by this book' Albion

'a coherent and unified collection which should appeal to both political historians and historians of political thought. Indeed it may help to break down that division.' Political Studies

Other reviews include Victorian Studies, Utilitas, History, Times Literary Supplement, Il Pensiero Politico, Politikon, Australian Journal of Politics and History and English History Review

(editor), Theories and Concepts of Politics: An Introduction (Manchester: Manchester University Press and St. Martin's Press, 1993)

'If you are looking for a single text, introducing students to the current state of political theory, then you won't do better than this' History of European Ideas

Other reviews include Filosofia Politica

(co-editor, with V. Bufacchi & D. Castiglione), Democracy and Constitutional Culture in the Union of Europe, (London: Lothian Foundation Press, 1995)

`a sophisticated and sympathetic collective effort to go beyond the conventional debate on the democratic deficit' Journal of Common Market Studies

`will be greatly appreciated by those interested in constitutionalism, citizenship and the future structure of the European Union.' Modern Law Review

Other reviews include Government and Opposition, Political Studies

(editor) Constitutionalism, Democracy and Sovereignty: American and European Perspectives, (Ashgate: Avebury Press, 1996) (First volume of a series sponsored by the UK Association for Social and Legal Philosophy)

Reviews include History of Political Thought and Neue Politische Literatur

(co-editor with Angus Ross), A Textual Introduction to Social and Political Thought (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1996)

'the book stems from an interdisciplinary course … for students in philosophy, politics and sociology. It would make an excellent textbook for use in similar courses elsewhere.' International Journal of the Classical Tradition

Other reviews include Southeastern Political Review

(co-editor, with Martin Hollis), Pluralism and Liberal Neutrality, (London: Frank Cass, 1999) (Also appeared as a special issue of Critical Review of International Social and Political Philosophy Vol. 1, n. 3 1998)

`a useful, uniformly well-written, and interestingly varied set of essays' Political Quarterly

(co-editor with Alex Warleigh), Citizenship and Governance in the European Union, (London: Continuum, 2001, reissued 2005)

'The book not only reflects the great variety of fields in which EU citizenship has become an important concept for understanding the political character of the EU, but provides … a profound analysis of both its theoretical implications and its practical development in the Euro-Polity.' West European Politics

'This is a most useful book, both for those interested in the detailed developments of the European Union and theorists who are concerned with the question of the state and sovereignty.' European Foreign Affairs

`The book is a well-written and well-documented volume. It is a major addition to the field of citizenship studies.' Democratization

Other reviews include Journal of Common Market Studies and Millennium.

(co-editor with Andrew Mason), Political Concepts, (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2003)

'an intelligent review of political concepts' Australian Journal of Political Science

'… the essays … reveal the larger philosophical and political debates lying just below the surface of the concept … To compress all of these essays into one volume is itself a notable achievement.' Perspectives on Political Science

Other reviews include Contemporary Political Thought

(co-editor with T. Ball), The Cambridge History of Twentieth Century Political Thought, (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2003, translated into Persian, Chinese and Spanish)

'… an impressive work of reference … this is an indispensable map. If you care about politics and agree with Keynes that ideas matter, you will find this an essential reference tool.' Economist

`… completely indispensable to those concerned with this general field.' English Historical Review

`this is a splendid volume.' Canadian Journal of Political Science

'… provides an interesting and wide-ranging analysis.' International Affairs

`This really excellent collection provides a valuable background to political philosophy … its 28 essays are of a consistently high standard. Philosophical Books

Other reviews include the Times Literary Supplement, Times Higher Education, Historical Journal, European Journal of Political Theory (review article), Der Staat and European Legacy.

(co-editor with Dario Castiglione and Emilio Santoro), Lineages of European Citizenship: Rights, Belonging and Participation in Eleven Nation States, (Palgrave, 2004)

'the general introduction, written by co-editor Richard Bellamy, raises a very inspiring framework for citizenship studies' Political Studies Review

`this volume is extremely valuable. It is essential reading for scholars interested in two different but at the same time interrelated processes of the development of national and common European citizenship.' West European Politics

`This critical and comparative study is a useful basis for further research on citizenship and Europeanization.' British Journal of Sociology

`The principal value of the current volume is in some extremely penetrating accounts of national traditions, to our understanding of which it makes valuable contributions.' English Historical Review

Other reviews include British Journal of Politics and International Relations

(editor), The Rule of Law and the Separation of Powers, International Library of Essays in Law and Legal Theory - Second Series, Ashgate/Dartmouth, 2005

`a welcome addition to the literature ... seventeen articles by leading scholars … are preceded by a lengthy introduction in which Bellamy not only summarizes the contributions of the authors contained in the book, but offers his own valuable insights into the rule of law.' Law and Politics Book Review

(editor), Constitutionalism and Democracy, International Library of Essays in Law and Legal Theory - Second Series, (Dartmouth, 2006), pp. xi-xlviii.

'This volume provides a comprehensive compilation of contemporary essays on the tension between constitutionalism and democracy ... [A]ll essays have been chosen carefully [and] are closely related to each other, like in a dialogue, which adds considerably to their individual qualities ... This book will therefore be highly valuable not only for graduates or postgraduates but will also become an essential tool for all academics interested in this topic.' Political Studies Review

(co-editor with D. Castiglione and J. Shaw), Making European Citizens: Civic Inclusion in a Transnational Context (Palgrave, 2006)

'The book is well written and gives the reader a new way of approaching European citizenship … highly recommended.' Political Studies Review

`Extremely timely … a genuinely informative book, which helps to enhance our understanding of the obstacles to participation, representation and identity formation within the EU … highly recommended.' Journal of Common Market Studies

'The merit of the present volume is that it shows how far the EU is from replicating the moderate successes of welfare states, governed through systems of party competition, and so how far it is from a meaningful conception of a democratic polity'. Public Administration

`edited by three leading scholars … the coherence of the volume is noteworthy… Most chapters provide very valuable contributions to the subject. The introductory chapter by the editors is remarkable in its ability to synthesise in a few pages vast knowledge on citizenship … Interestingly, 'optimism of the will' is not absent from some of the contributions, but … the reader of this outstanding volume would be inclined to think that 'pessimism of the intellect' is the appropriate conclusion as regards an active European citizenship.' West European Politics

`edited by three of the leading voices in European Union studies ... The volume is replete with rich insights and meanings, and deserves further reading, even for those relatively familiar with EU citizenship. This collection and its individual chapters will no doubt be cited by those seeking to get to grips with EU citizenship, its problems, its potential and likely future trajectories for years to come.'
Common Market Law Review
