Ability to foster and maintain a good therapeutic alliance, and to grasp the client's perspective and 'world view'*

Understanding the concept of the therapeutic alliance

An ability to draw on knowledge that the therapeutic alliance is usually seen as having three components:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Component</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>the relationship or bond between therapist and client</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>consensus between therapist and client regarding the techniques/methods employed in the therapy</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>consensus between therapist and client regarding the goals of therapy</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

An ability to draw on knowledge that all three components contribute to the maintenance of the alliance.

Knowledge of therapist factors associated with the alliance

An ability to draw on knowledge of therapist factors which increase the probability of forming a positive alliance:

- being flexible and allowing the client to discuss issues which are important to them
- being respectful
- being warm, friendly and affirming
- being open
- being alert and active
- being able to show honesty through self-reflection
- being trustworthy

Knowledge of therapist factors which reduce the probability of forming a positive alliance:

- being rigid
- being critical
- making inappropriate self-disclosure
- being distant
- being aloof
- being distracted
- making inappropriate use of silence

Capacity to develop the alliance

An ability to listen to the client’s concerns in a manner which is non-judgmental, supportive and sensitive, and which conveys a comfortable attitude when the client describes their experience.

An ability to ensure that the client is clear about the rationale for the intervention being offered.

An ability to gauge whether the client understands the rationale for the intervention, has questions about it, or is skeptical about the rationale, and to respond to these concerns openly and non-defensively in order to resolve any ambiguities.

An ability to help the client express any concerns or doubts they have about the therapy and/or the therapist, especially where this relates to mistrust or skepticism

An ability to help the client articulate their goals for the therapy, and to gauge the degree of congruence in the aims of the client and therapist

Capacity to grasp the client's perspective and ‘world view’

An ability to apprehend the ways in which the client characteristically understands themselves and the world around them

An ability to hold the client’s world view in mind throughout the course of therapy and to convey this understanding through interactions with the client, in a manner that allows the client to correct any misapprehensions

An ability to hold the client’s world view in mind, while retaining an independent perspective and guarding against identification with the client

Capacity to maintain the alliance

Capacity to recognise and to address threats to the therapeutic alliance (‘alliance ruptures’)

An ability to recognise when strains in the alliance threaten the progress of therapy

An ability to deploy appropriate interventions in response to disagreements about tasks and goals:

- An ability to check that the client is clear about the rationale for treatment and to review this with them and/or clarify any misunderstandings
- An ability to help clients understand the rationale for treatment through using/drawing attention to concrete examples in the session
- An ability to judge when it is best to refocus on tasks and goals which are seen as relevant or manageable by the client (rather than explore factors which are giving rise to disagreement over these factors)

An ability to deploy appropriate interventions in response to strains in the bond between therapist and client:

- An ability for the therapist to give and ask for feedback about what is happening in the here-and-now interaction, in a manner which invites exploration with the client
- An ability for the therapist to acknowledge and accept their responsibility for their contribution to any strains in the alliance
- Where the client recognises and acknowledges that the alliance is under strain, an ability to help the client make links between the rupture and their usual style of relating to others
- An ability to allow the client to assert any negative feelings about the relationship between the therapist and themselves
- An ability to help the client explore any fears they have about expressing negative feelings about the relationship between the therapist and themselves
