THE BDRC PhD LECTURE SERIES

Friday 30th June 2017 10:00
June Lloyd Seminar Room

Andrew Copp
Developmental Biology & Cancer

"Writing scientific English: some common pitfalls and how to avoid them"

ABSTRACT
We all need to express ourselves in written English, whether it is in a PhD thesis, paper or grant application. Learning to do this properly does not often feature in university science courses, and many people struggle as a result. This PhD lecture will be an interactive journey through some of the common mistakes that people make. I will challenge you to spot a variety of different types of mistakes, and then suggest ways to avoid them in future. For those of you who already write perfect English - please do an experiment instead.”