Register here.

Rethinking Folk Art brings together a panel of early career scholars, Lucía Abramovich (San Antonio Museum of Art, Texas, US), Sonali Gupta (Himalayan Institute of Cultural and Heritage Studies, Kullu Valley, India), and Gabriela Germaná (Florida State University, Florida, US), thinking critically about the term 'folk art' and how it has been applied, interpreted, and subverted over time and in different geographic and regional contexts. Abramovich, Gupta-Agarwal, and Germaná will reflect on how they have engaged with this concept in their work and research in museums, academia, and communities of practice.
