

Is the study confidential?

We always take great care to protect the confidentiality of the information you give us. The study results will never be in a form that can reveal your identity. Your name and address will only be known to the researchers at the National Centre for Social Research (NatCen) and will not be stored with the information you provide.

We also obtain information about the health and economic circumstances of some of our respondents from the National Health Service Central Register, the Cancer Registry, the Hospital Episodes Statistics register, the Department for Work and Pensions and Her Majesty's Revenues and Customs (which now incorporates the Inland Revenue). You may already have given us permission to obtain this information, but if not, we may ask for your consent to do so during the course of the interview. If you agree, we would link these details to what you have already told us in the survey. Like everything else you have told us, the information will be completely confidential and will be used for research purposes only. Names and addresses are never included in the results and no individual can be identified from the research. You do not have to give your consent for us to obtain this data and you can change your mind at any time by writing to the address below.

Who can I contact about the study?

ELSA English
Longitudinal
Study of Ageing

Health and lifestyles of people aged 50 and over

This leaflet gives you more information about the content of the study, and answers questions you may have. If you have any queries or need to contact us, please call freephone 0800 652 4569

What is the study about?

The English Longitudinal Study of Ageing (ELSA) explores the health, lifestyles and financial situation of people as they grow older. 12,000 people aged 50 and over, and their partners, have now taken part in the study.

You may have helped us previously with the study, for which we are most grateful, and we hope that you can help us again. Alternatively, this may be the first time we have approached you to take part. By talking to as many people as possible, we can ensure that we get a full range of experiences. Participation is voluntary, though we do hope you will take part and contribute to our understanding of the experience of growing older.

Why are you important?

You are invaluable to our study. We are gradually building up a picture of people living in Britain aged 50 and over. Although the study will not be of direct benefit to you, the information you provide will help us to collect good quality data to ensure the government provides health care and pension systems tailored to people's needs.

What does the study involve?

An interviewer from NatCen will come and visit you in your home to conduct the interview.

When the interviewer visits they will ask you questions about things we believe to be important in the lives of people aged 50 and over. If you are already a member of the study, you will be familiar with the content of the interview. Topics covered include health, housing, work, retirement, pensions and the quality of life.

We have also added some new questions including some on your dental health, diet and physical activity. You may be asked to think back over time and tell us more about where you have lived, your family history and your work in the past.

The last time we visited members of this study there was also a nurse interview. There will be no nurse visit this time.

The interview is both varied and interesting, and we hope you will enjoy the experience. It can be arranged according to your needs and availability. Agreeing to participate now does not commit you to continuing. You can change your mind at any time and let us know that you no longer wish to take part.

Your interviewer will be happy to address any questions you may have.

Who is paying for the study?

Half of the funding has come from a number of UK government departments. The other half has been provided by the National Institute on Aging from the United States who also fund a parallel study in the USA.

Who is carrying out the study?

The study is being carried out by some of Britain's leading research organisations in health, economics and social research:

- National Centre for Social Research (NatCen)
- International Centre for Health and Society, University College London
- Institute for Fiscal Studies
- Cambridge University
