

Global Governance Institute

Annual Report 2020-21

About the UCL Global Governance Institute

Situated within the Department of Political Science/School of Public Policy at University College London (UCL), the Global Governance Institute (GGI) is a leading research and public policy centre in this vital field of inquiry.

The GGI undertakes in-depth, cross-disciplinary study of pressing issues in governance, in order to explore the nature of the problem, the processes, structures, and institutions involved and to identify solutions. It provides a crucial link between academic researchers, leaders in the wider society, as well as the general public. It also actively seeks to engage and support the next generation of global policy-makers within our student body.

Unlike many other governance research and policy centres, with its rare breadth of scholarly excellence, the GGI is uniquely placed to draw upon UCL's world-leading expertise across a wide span of disciplines – from economics, law, political science, public policy and anthropology to medicine and public health, Earth sciences, engineering and disaster risk management. The GGI strives to reflect UCL's guiding ethos of cross-disciplinary collaboration, facilitating connections among diverse colleagues and interested parties to promote informed public debate on possible solutions to global societal challenges.

The GGI Director, David Coen, and Deputy Director, Tom Pegram, can be contacted by email at d.coen@ucl.ac.uk and t.peggram@ucl.ac.uk.

GGI Objectives

- Establish UCL as a world leader in global governance scholarship, policy and practice, able to apply our collective expertise and insights from various disciplines and translate them into deliverable and sustainable policy solutions
- Engage diverse viewpoints and enable the widest possible participation in Institute activities to promote innovation of thought and gain novel insights
- Establish a robust network of research and strategic partnerships within UCL, based on shared goals, as well as forge links with external partners in the worlds of government, commerce and the third sector
- Serve as a hub and facilitator for innovative research collaboration within and across disciplines
- Provide an independent source of impactful public policy research and integrate knowledge and research capabilities from across the public and private sectors
- Work with partners in the public and private sectors to apply academic analysis to current problems of governance, with a focus on how potential solutions can be adapted to tackle 'real world' problems
- Engage and support the next generation of global policy-makers within our student body.

Active Research Areas

Biodiversity governance	Informal authority structures
Climate change governance	International human rights institutions
Complex global risks	Laws of war and transnational security
Covid-19 recovery	Legitimacy in global governance
Disaster risk and resilience	Multilateralism and its future
Global crackdown on civil society	Multilevel governance
Global economic governance	Regulatory innovation
Global governance effectiveness	The EU's role in global governance
Global health governance	Torture prohibition and prevention
Global public policy	Transnational business governance
Global trade policy	Science, technology and security
Hybrid governance structures	Sustainable Development Goals.

2020-21: A Year in Review

2020-21 has been a steep learning curve. While the focus has rightly centred on containing the Covid-19 pandemic and the effective rollout of the vaccine programme, attention is now turning to lessons to be learnt for responding to future emerging global threats. We know national state capacity is of critical importance, but there is also a role for global strategy in health governance, particularly when it comes to ensuring protection of vulnerable groups. This important point has become acute as the complex second and third order effects of the pandemic response roam into view, from food supply break downs to rising energy costs and unemployment. The shock of Covid-19 has exposed global systemic fragilities across multiple systems – health, environment, technological, political and economic – which will require robust global coordination if a recovery from the pandemic is to effectively tackle the looming climate and nature emergencies.

As Dave Snowden (Cognitive Edge) remarked at a recent GGI keynote panel, responding to this imperative as a matter of urgency is likely not about designing perfect systems, but rather starting from where people are. Global governance in some form may be essential to managing irreducibly transboundary challenges, such as a global pandemic. However, as Snowden argues, it is vital that scholars and policymakers do not let the perfect “predetermined future state” be the enemy of “managing the present to actually create a new direction of travel” along positive evolutionary pathways. Exploring the upside of risks and uncertainties is now vital.

Despite the challenges posed by the past year, the UCL Global Governance Institute (GGI) has continued to undertake its core mission to provide in-depth, cross-disciplinary and cross-thematic research to better understand the global challenges we face and possible responses. What lessons do we take from the response to Covid-19 for understanding our existing ability to respond adequately to transboundary non-linear challenges? Are states maladaptive when it comes to effectively dealing with global problems? What would a resilient global governance system look like? How can we, as a community of scholars and educators, best prepare young people for the challenges ahead?

The Institute has also redoubled its efforts to make innovative use of digital tools and social media to contribute to informed public debate. To this end, it hosted a full roster of public virtual events and welcomed a truly international audience through the wonders of the Zoom webinar platform. We have been delighted to be joined by many prominent scholars, policy experts and public figures, including (but not limited to) Professor Katherine Hayhoe, Professor Miles Kahler, Professor Ahmet T. Kuru, Professor Jacqueline McGlade, Professor Aseem Prakash, and Professor Alexander Stubb. We were also delighted to collaborate with Lesley Rankin and Laurie Laybourn-Langton at the Institute for Public Policy Research and Dave Snowden at Cognitive Edge on our new research agenda probing what complexity means for global governance.

GGI team members have been frequent contributors to topical news podcasts both within and outside UCL. The Institute also launched its own podcast, co-hosted by students (now alumni) of the Masters programme in Global Governance and Ethics. The podcast, called Imperfect Utopias or Bust? Global Governance Futures, has aired 14 episodes since its launch in October 2020 and it has proven popular, especially on our YouTube platform. In addition, GGI team members have contributed opinion pieces to The Conversation, the World Economic Forum and other venues on topical issues, from the COP26 climate summit to the future risks posed by deadly pandemics, and the importance of tackling social inequalities if net-zero carbon emissions is to be achieved.

The GGI continues to collaborate with UCL-based, national and international partners in research, policy and practice. In 2020-21, the GGI team worked with colleagues across Europe and beyond to advance two research projects on climate change governance and global governance effectiveness, as part of an EU Horizon 2020 research consortium focused on identifying future scenarios for global governance. The GGI has also become an active member of the COP26 Universities Network which brings together more than 45 UK-based universities to help deliver ambitious outcomes at the upcoming UN Climate Summit in Glasgow. As part of this initiative, GGI Deputy Director Tom Pegram led a group of academic experts in producing a briefing paper on pathways to socially inclusive decarbonisation.

Throughout the year, the GGI Thematic Directors – Dr Zeynep Bulutgil and Dr Manuel Vogt (global security), Professor Barnali Choudhury (global justice and ethics), and Dr Julius Mugwagwa (global health) – have engaged our community of faculty, students, civil society, policymakers and the general public through events, workshops and publications on a wide range of topics, from global health governance in a time of Covid-19 to vaccine readiness in developing countries, the determinants of civil war and the systemic risks posed by climate change, among others.

This year, the GGI has received generous grants from UCL Grand Challenges, the UCL Environment Domain and the UCL Global Engagement Office which have facilitated major activities on a shared agenda for the UN Sustainable Development Goals on biodiversity and climate change, as well as on complex risk governance for a green and sustainable recovery from Covid-19. Funding has allowed for ongoing and new collaboration with colleagues across ten UCL departments and institutes (Anthropocene, Bartlett DPU, BSEER, CBER, Energy Institute, IRDR, ISR, Political Sciences, STEaPP, and WRC), leading international experts, including Professor Sir Bob Watson (former chair of IPBES and IPCC) and Professor Natalie Seddon (University of Oxford), as well as prominent voices in national policy conversations, such as Lord Toby Harris (Chair of the UK National Preparedness Commission).

With support from UCL Grand Challenges and the UCL Global Engagement Office, the GGI was also able to provide awards for a university-wide student essay competition on the climate and biodiversity crisis. Our winner was Jeremy Ogilvie-Harris (UCL Laws) for his excellent essay on The Importance of Public Participation in Environmental Decision Making: The UK Environment Bill. Honourable mentions also go to our runners-up Kata Moravec, Daniel Richardson, and Jingwen Zhang. We are extremely grateful to the support we continue to receive from students across UCL who regularly support our activities by writing commentaries, providing research for policy briefs, and conducting interviews.

As we move into 2021-22, the GGI will continue to work to amplify UCL's track record as a leader in research impact focused on driving forward innovation and enhancing resilience in response to global challenges. The Institute's mission is closely aligned with the goals of UCL 2034 to identify solutions to global societal problems – such as climate change, global health, war and conflict, as well as human rights. Going forward, the GGI will build further upon the findings of the UCL Grand Challenges programme and its mechanisms for bringing expertise together and integrating knowledge, as well as capitalising on existing effort and good will across the university.

Thematic Directors

The GGI's Thematic Directors form an integral part of the growing community of scholars working on global governance at UCL. Throughout 2020-21, they have made crucial contributions to GGI institution-building, research, policy and student engagement activities as well as the public events programme.

Global Justice and Ethics

Barnali Choudhury is a Professor at UCL Laws. Her research focuses on the intersection between economic issues and human rights at both international and domestic levels. Recent work has also focused on the urgent need to address systemic 'grey rhino' risks in the context of Covid-19 and accelerating climate change, with a Working Paper on 'Climate Change as Systemic Risk' published on the GGI website.

Global Health

Julius Mugwagwa is Associate Professor in Innovation & Development at the UCL Department of Science, Technology, Engineering and Public Policy (STeAPP). In 2020-21, Dr Mugwagwa organised and chaired a public panel discussion on 'Developing Countries and Covid-19 Vaccine-Readiness,' which brought together experts and practitioners from across Africa and the Middle East. Dr

Mugwagwa also facilitated a student-led workshop on 'Learning Through a Pandemic,' which provided a platform for students across the world to share their experiences with Covid-19.

Global Security

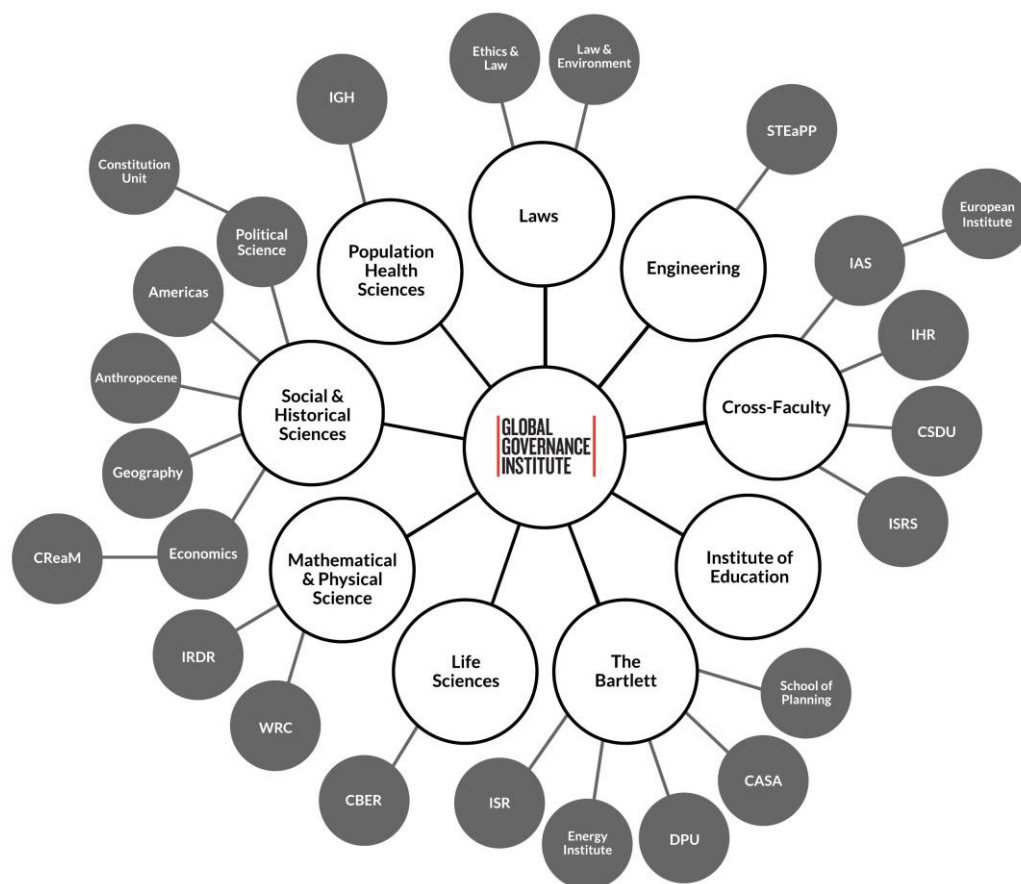

Zeynep Bulutgil is Associate Professor in the UCL Department of Political Science, where she works on political violence, religious and political institutions, inequality and ethnic politics. Manuel Vogt is also Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science. His research focuses on non-state actors and contentious politics in developing countries. In 2020-21,

Dr Bulutgil and Dr Vogt organised two public lectures, featuring Professor Ahmet Kuru (San Diego State University) and Dr Jonah Schulhofer-Wohl (Leiden University).

Celebrating the legacy of Professor Dame Georgina Mace

In 2020, we were deeply saddened by the passing of Professor Dame Georgina Mace (former GGI Thematic Director on Global Environmental Sustainability), a world-leading authority on biodiversity and a much-valued UCL colleague. In honour of her life and work, the GGI staged a cross-disciplinary workshop and public panel discussion on 'A Shared Agenda on Biodiversity and Climate Change,' which built on previous collaborations with Georgina and her team at the UCL Centre for Biodiversity and Environment Research (CBER).

External Networks and Partnerships

In addition to collaborating with UCL colleagues across a wide span of disciplines, the GGI has forged strong links with external partners in research, policy and practice.

Global Governance and the EU: Future Trends and Scenarios (GLOBE)

Funded by the European Commission's Horizon 2020 programme, GLOBE brings together an international consortium of 10 academic partners from 8 countries to conduct research on future trends and scenarios in global governance. The GGI leads on a work package on climate change and also provides input on a cross-cutting work package on global governance.

COP26 Universities Network

The COP26 Universities Network brings together more than 45 UK-based universities to help deliver ambitious outcomes at the upcoming UN Climate Summit in Glasgow. GGI Deputy Director Tom Pegram has led on a network briefing on the 'just transition' agenda and socially inclusive decarbonisation pathways.

Jean Monnet Network on EU/China Global Economic Governance

Funded by a Jean Monnet Network grant, this research network brings together a multidisciplinary group of experts to assess the role of China and the EU in global economic governance. The network is coordinated by CEU San Pablo University and includes researchers from academic institutions across Europe and China.

International Global Governance Network

The International Global Governance Network brings together individual researchers and academic institutions in the field of global governance around the world to discuss current trends in global governance scholarship and explore possibilities for scaling up collaboration.

UK Network on the Prohibition of Torture

Launched in 2017, this network brings together leading practitioners, policy-makers and academics across the UK to scale up collaboration on the prohibition of torture and ill-treatment.

External Networks and Partnerships

Beyond participation in the above networks, the GGI regularly collaborates with leading thinkers and academics across the world on events, workshop and specific research projects.

Institute Achievements 2020-21

With the support of its broad network of partners and collaborators, the GGI has become a recognised voice in global governance research and policy debates. In 2020-21, despite the disruptions caused by Covid-19, the Institute has been able to consolidate and expand its network at UCL, in the UK and internationally, including through continued collaborative research engagement under the Horizon 2020 funded GLOBE project on future scenarios in global governance. In addition, the GGI has made important contributions to global governance scholarship this year, advancing key research agendas on environmental governance and complex systems dynamics through various academic publications, research workshops and reports. Promoting impactful policy dialogue and public debate on issues of global governance has also remained a core aim of the Institute, as reflected in a busy virtual programme of events and workshops, which brought together high-level speakers and a truly global audience. Successful funding bids, including for UCL Grand Challenges grant schemes, have enabled the GGI to stage high-level policy-facing research workshops and public panel discussions. Among other topics, these events have focused on the prospects for integrated climate and biodiversity governance and on pathways towards a green and sustainable recovery from COVID-19. The GGI has also continued to engage a broad general and student audience, including through its new Global Governance Futures podcast.

Institutional Strengthening

- Close collaboration with all GGI Thematic Directors – Dr Barnali Choudhury (Global Justice and Ethics), Dr Julius Mugwagwa (Global Health), Dr Zeynep Bulutgil and Dr Manuel Vogt (both Global Security) – on a range of research/policy workshops, public events and student engagement activities

- Continued engagement with the GGI Academic Steering Board and Advisory Board, with several members facilitating or participating in GGI workshops and public events
- Sustained collaboration with various faculties, departments and institutes across UCL, including – but not limited to – the Bartlett Development Planning Unit (DPU), the Bartlett School of Environment, Energy and Resources (BSEER), Laws, the Institute for Global Health, the Department of Science, Technology, Engineering and Public Policy (STeAPP), the Institute for Sustainable Resources (ISR), and the European Institute
- Expansion of the GGI's institutional network at UCL through the establishment of close ties with the cross-disciplinary Anthropocene initiative, the Centre for Biodiversity and Environment Research (CBER) and the newly launched Warning Research Centre (WRC)
- Expansion of the GGI's UCL-based expert network through the recruitment of new collaborators (Dr Simon Chin-Yee, Dr Brian Dooley, Dr Carina Fearnley, Angelica Johansson, and Dr Buğra Süssler), all of whom have contributed to GGI events and/or publications last year
- Continued engagement with the GGI's external networks, notably with individuals and institutions participating in the Horizon 2020 funded project on future scenarios in global governance (GLOBE)
- Expansion of the GGI's external network through participation in the COP26 Universities Network, which involved close collaboration with colleagues at the universities of Bristol, Durham, Edinburgh, Keele, Nottingham, York and Royal Holloway, University of London
- Continued collaboration with the UCL Global Engagement Office (GEO) / Office of the Vice-Provost (International) and UCL Public Policy / Office of the Vice-Provost (Research) as well as UCL Grand Challenges
- Recruitment of a Research Assistant to assist with two major policy-facing research workshops
- Participation in the Q-Step internship programme.

Summary output: As the GGI continues to foster cross-disciplinary research exchange and informed public debate, it can rely on a broad and diverse network of collaborators, partners and supporters at UCL and externally. Virtual exchange in 2020-21 has allowed the GGI to expand its international network further despite the pandemic.

Global Governance Research

- Ongoing research outputs and activities by the GGI directors, researchers and Thematic Directors, including under the Horizon 2020 funded project on 'Global Governance and the European Union: Future Trends and Scenarios (GLOBE)'

- Hosted the third General Assembly of the GLOBE project in September 2020
- Launched a new research agenda on governing complex global risks
- Hosted a research workshop on ‘Governing Complexity’ (15 December 2021), which brought together leading thinkers and scholars on systems thinking and sparked further collaborations with complexity experts, including colleagues from the Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR) and leading complexity thinker Dave Snowden (Cognitive Edge)
- Organised a workshop on ‘Complex Risk Governance for a Green and Sustainable Recovery from COVID-19’ (1 June 2021), which informed the production of a widely circulated research-policy outcome report
- Organised a workshop on ‘A Shared Agenda for the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals on Biodiversity and Climate Change’ (4 May 2021), which provided input for a widely circulated research-policy outcome report
- Activities to support future thinkers in global governance research, including through Global Governance Futures ‘podclasses’ and a UCL-wide essay competition on environmental governance

Summary output: The GGI continues to spearhead innovative global governance scholarship through its research, publications, workshops, education and networking activities. It remains committed to promoting cross-disciplinary and cross-thematic learning with a view to designing more adaptive and resilient governance models, capable of responding to increasingly complex global risks.

Public Outreach and Public Policy Impact

- Staged 15 public events with over 1000 total participants. Due to Covid-19, all events were held virtually, allowing speakers and participants from across the globe to join. The events highlighted important issues in global governance and featured high-profile scholars, policy experts and public figures, such as Lord Toby Harris (National Preparedness Commission UK), Professor Katharine Hayhoe (Texas Tech University), Professor Miles Kahler (American University), Professor Alexander Stubb (European University Institute), Professor Natalie Seddon (University of Oxford) or Professor Sir Robert Watson (former chair IPCC and IPBES), among many others
- Regularly published event videos, commentaries, podcasts, and other outputs on the GGI website and social media channels
- Launched the Global Governance Futures podcast, a platform for dialogue and reflection on the complex challenges facing humanity and possible global responses. The podcast is hosted by GGI Deputy Director Tom Pegram and a team of (former) students from UCL's MSc Global Governance and Ethics programme. Since its launch in October 2020, the podcast has aired 14 episodes featuring cutting-edge thinkers on global governance. The podcast has proven popular, with 13,194 views/listens and 346 individual subscribers across various platforms (Spotify, SoundCloud and YouTube)
- Publication of analyses and opinion pieces in outlets such as The Conversation and the World Economic Forum blog
- Participation of GGI team members in podcasts (incl. UCL-based podcasts Uncovering Politics and Coronavirus: The Whole Story), external events (incl. various GLOBE Webinars) and media interviews
- Dissemination of event invitations, news and publications via the GGI's mailing list (3,877 subscribers), Twitter (1,478 followers) and other channels
- Publication of two widely circulated research-policy briefs on The UN SDGs on Biodiversity, Climate Change and Health: Towards a Shared Agenda and Pathways to a Green and Just Recovery from COVID-19: Promoting Systemic Change for Greater Sustainability and Resilience
- Provided input to the review of a new flagship assessment report by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC).

Summary output: In 2020-21, the GGI and its partners hosted a number of workshops and public events that aimed at transcending policy-research siloes and engaging a diverse group of practitioners, policy-makers, civil society representatives and other stakeholders. The disruptions caused by Covid-19 have presented both challenges and opportunities for the Institute's outreach activities. Notably, moving events online has allowed the GGI to engage a more international audience, beyond the UK, Europe and North America.

GGI's global audience in 2020-21 (unique viewers from 65 countries)

Education and Student Engagement

- Students across UCL, including those enrolled in the MSc Global Governance and Ethics (GGE), have continued to provide invaluable support to the Institute's activities by writing commentaries and helping to organise and report on GGI events
- Staged a UCL-wide student essay competition on how to tackle the climate and biodiversity crises. The winning essay and runner-up contributions have been published on the GGI website and widely circulated
- Hosted a global health policy platform on 'Learning Through a Pandemic,' led by MPA students at the UCL Department of Science, Technology, Engineering and Public Policy (STePP) and facilitated by GGI Thematic Director for Global Health, Julius Mugwagwa. The event brought together students from across the world to share their personal experiences with Covid-19 and their views on how the pandemic has reinforced inequalities within the student body, both on the national and global level.
- Active participation of (former) GGE students in the GGI's Global Governance Futures podcast as co-hosts and co-producers
- Production of student-facing 'podclasses' featuring on Global Governance Futures
- Student-facing Greta's Generation podcast, hosted by GGI Research Fellow Kyle Herman, aimed at generating expert insight and advice for the future generation of climate leaders
- Continued collaboration with the student-led GGE society.

Summary output: The GGI remains committed to engaging future generations of global governance leaders by offering students unique insights into its research and policy-focused activities. GGE students provide invaluable support to the Institute's events and publication programme by serving as rapporteurs and commentators on GGI workshops and public lectures.

Funding and Awards

- Continued work under the Horizon 2020 research grant on 'Global Governance and the European Union: Future Trends and Scenarios (GLOBE).' The GGI is part of a consortium of 10 research institutions from 8 countries, led by the Institut Barcelona d'Estudis Internacionals (IBEI). The GGI leads on the work package on climate change and provides input on a cross-cutting work package on global governance
- Award of a UCL Grand Challenge and UCL Global Engagement Office grant to GGI Deputy Director Tom Pegram (with GGI Researcher Julia Kreienkamp) and Oxford University's Professor Nathalie Seddon for the organisation of a workshop on 'A Shared Agenda for the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals on Biodiversity and Climate Change'
- Award of a UCL Grand Challenges and UCL Environment Domain grant to Dr Tom Pegram and Dr Carina Fearnley (UCL Department of Science and Technology Studies) for the organisation of a cross-disciplinary workshop on 'Complex Risk Governance for a Green and Sustainable Recovery from COVID-19'
- Successful application by GGI Deputy Director Tom Pegram for a Dean's Strategic Funds Award for a faculty-student collaborative podcast project aimed at exploring the implications of the Covid-19 pandemic for environmental governance
- Successful application by GGI Research Fellow Kyle Herman for a Dean's Strategic Funds Award to support his student-facing podcast on climate governance and supporting the new generation of climate leaders
- Paper by Julia Kreienkamp and Tom Pegram on 'Governing Complexity: Design Principles for the Governance of Complex Global Catastrophic Risks' (International Studies Review, 2020) shortlisted for Lloyd's Science of Risk Prize
- Ongoing engagement with UCL benefactors and the UCL Development and Alumni Relations Office.

Summary output: In 2020-21, the GGI and its partners have secured generous grants from UCL Grand Challenges and other UCL initiatives, which have allowed us to stage several high-level events, outreach and student engagement activities. The Institute can draw on a diverse network of partners across UCL and beyond to deliver on these grants and develop future high-quality research proposals.

Resources and Budget

Current and forecast budget summaries are available and constantly monitored. The Institute leadership is actively exploring funding opportunities from a variety of external sources, including alumni, foundations and trusts to sustain the core business of the Institute.

Looking Towards 2021-22

The GGI is increasingly recognised as a key referent point for global governance scholarship and practice in London, the UK and internationally. Moving into 2021-22, the GGI will advance various ambitious initiatives already underway, including by delivering on major research projects, continuing the expansion of its partner network, and bringing its important work to a wider audience. The following table itemises the main outputs to be achieved over the next reporting cycle, in close collaboration with all relevant stakeholders at UCL.
