

UCL Research Scholarships (GRS/ORS/CSC)

UCL's main research scholarship schemes are now open for 2022/23 entry.

We are pleased to consider applications from prospective students for the Graduate Research Scholarships \(GRS\) and Overseas Research Scholarships \(ORS\). Applications must be submitted by Friday 14th January 2022.

Institute for Global Health applicants should notify us by email that they would like to apply and submit all documents to that email address. Full details are available from the UCL main scholarship webpages above.

We are also happy to consider applications for one of the 5 open UCL-China Scholarships Research Scholarships.

Scholarship applications will be reviewed initially within IGH and TWO candidates across the GRS and ORS scholarship schemes (plus one CSC candidate if applicable) will be recommended for consideration and decision centrally. We will contact IGH applicants at the end of January to inform them whether they are among the nominated candidates.

The UCL scheme is highly competitive, and a small number of applicants are successful in securing these scholarships.

Please note, prospective students must also submit a complete application for admission onto a UCL research degree programme by 14th January 2022. You do not need to have secured an offer of a place at UCL to apply for the scholarship, but you must have submitted your complete UCL research degree application to UCL Admissions by this deadline.

For information about how to apply to the Global Health MPhil/PhD programme, please see our prospectus and programme webpages, including the requirement to submit a 3-4 page project proposal and secure a primary supervisor before applying.

Project proposals for applicants who are not awarded a UCL Research Scholarship, but who are still interested in joining our MPhil/PhD programme, will be internally reviewed by two academics and an offer of a place will, in part, be subject to positive reviews. Applicants will need to secure funding from other sources.
