GP tutor conference Awards

The UCL primary care teaching team value your contribution to teaching. We admire that GP tutors are helping inspire and train the next generation of doctors.

This year we have introduced awards to celebrate the excellent teaching our students are receiving from GP’s and practices.

Outstanding participation of a GP practice in teaching UCL medical students

This will be based on student feedback and contribution to UCL primary care teaching. Shortlisted practices will be contacted by the PCPH team and we will be asking for a brief statement (max 200 words) from a member of the practice team (GP or practice manager).

Further information:

Throughout the year, students are given the opportunity to feedback about their GP placements via Student Evaluation Questionnaires (SEQs). The primary care medical education team will review this feedback and we will shortlist practices that have outstanding feedback on the practice as a whole in their contributing to teaching and the students learning.

We will be contacting the shortlisted practices at the beginning of February 2019 for a short statement of up to 250 words on why your practice should win the award.

Excellent GP teacher demonstrating ‘good teaching practice’

This award is open to all GP tutors. Tutors are invited to nominate themselves for this award and for individuals who demonstrate excellence in teaching. The application involves writing up to 500 words on the following areas of teaching using examples:

- Facilitation of student learning
- Feedback
- Assessment
- Innovation
- Professional development

The applications will be reviewed by the primary care medical education team and shortlisted with the use of student evaluation questionnaire feedback from the previous year.

Please find the application form on our website and send to k.narvet@ucl.ac.uk by the 1st February 2019.

We will notify you if your application has been shortlisted and will inform the winner by mid-February 2019. We kindly ask that if you are successful that you could attend the GP tutors conference to receive your award.
