Delegates from recent courses have said:

“The balance between theoretical and practical was excellent. Very thought provoking and challenging”
(Dynamic Differentiation).

“The course was very informative, packed with very useful resources. It has enabled me to reflect upon my own practices when working with pupils with learning difficulties.” (SEMH Attachment Theory and Learning)

The UCL Centre for Inclusive Education runs a range of Professional Learning Networks.

These are comprised of three sessions which run over the course of the academic year and are an opportunity for interested colleagues to develop and exchange professional expertise.

The content of the sessions is directed by delegates and facilitated by lecturers from the UCL Centre for Inclusive Education.
