

The Prehistoric Society presents

‘The Sara Champion Debate’

An event to mark the 75th Anniversary of the Prehistoric Society

‘This House believes that the study of the Stone Ages has contributed more to our knowledge of the human condition than study of the Metal Ages’

with Professor Clive Gamble and Professor Tim Champion

Society of Antiquaries, Burlington House, Piccadilly, London
Wednesday 20th October 2010 at 6pm

In place of the Sara Champion Memorial Lecture, we are celebrating the Society’s 75th anniversary with a special event starring Professors Clive Gamble (Royal Holloway, University of London) and Tim Champion (University of Southampton). Our distinguished speakers will debate, in a not wholly serious fashion, the relative merits of the Stone Ages versus the Metal Ages, while the President of the Society attempts to keep order and the audience decides the winner. Will you gamble on Clive or is Tim your champion...?

The debate will begin at 6.30pm, preceded by a wine reception from 6pm.

*Please note that advance booking is required for this event: tickets will not be available on the door.
Priority will be given to members of the Prehistoric Society.*

Please book me places at £5 each for ‘The Sara Champion Debate’ and wine reception

I am a member of the Prehistoric Society YES/NO (please delete as applicable)

My cheque for is enclosed (made payable to The Prehistoric Society)*

* The Prehistoric Society is a registered charity No. 1000567

Name: Email (preferred method of contact):

Phone: Address:

Please return with remittance to: Tessa Machling, The Prehistoric Society, c/o Institute of Archaeology, UCL, 31-34
Gordon Sq, London WC1H 0PY
by Monday 6th September 2010