Alienation and loneliness inside environments for Ψ

Dr Evangelia Chrysikou
Medical architect

Lecturer, Program Director MSc Healthcare Facilities

The Bartlett Real Estate Institute, University College London UK

Vice President, Urban Public Health, EUPHA

D4 Action Group Co-ordinator, EIP on AHA, European Commission
Colder shades indicate fewer human co-presence and warmer shades higher human co-presence,
With dark blue indicating fewer chances to dark red indicating higher chances

Position of the observer in the ward, just outside the nursing office door
360° - vision from the given point (red dot)
Memo

Healthcare Facilities  Mental Health Facilities  Underground Station
Thank you!

Dr Evangelia Chrysikou

e.chrysikou@ucl.ac.uk
M. 0044 7827571927

Visit: https://www.ucl.ac.uk/bartlett/real-estate/
Join: Evangelia Chrysikou PhD
Like: Design for mental health
Follow: @e_chrysikou, @UCL_BREI
Talk: synthesislia

The Bartlett_No 1 School of Architecture & Built Environment, QS 2019 Global Rankings

Bibliography

• Chrysikou, E., 2019. Psychiatric institutions and the physical environment: combining medical architecture methodologies and architectural morphology to increase our understanding. Journal of Healthcare Engineering

• Chrysikou, E., 2018. The ecopsychosocial complexities of acute psychiatric wards. Proceedings of the European Conference on Design 4 Health 2018

• Chrysikou, E., 2017. The social invisibility of mental health facilities. London: UCL

• Chrysikou, E., 2016. Inclusive Design and Mental Health: Policy and legislation challenges from the perspective of social inclusion. In Designing Around People

• Chrysikou, E., 2015. Building guidelines for mental health facilities. Report delivered to the Ministry of Health, funded by the European Commission

• Chrysikou, E., 2013. Accessibility for mental healthcare. Facilities, 31 (9/10)