

UCLP-Primrose: We want to learn about your experience

Over the next couple of months, you will be supported to make goals to improve your health. That is part of a service called UCLP-Primrose.

We are a team of researchers based at University College London and Bradford's Improvement Academy who are interested in understanding how UCLP-Primrose is experienced by patients. Therefore, we are looking to interview patients about how UCLP-Primrose worked for them.

How to get involved: if you would like to take part in an interview in the future, let a UCLP-Primrose member of staff know, and they will fill in a form which gives the researcher permission to contact you and give you some more information.

If you are uncertain about the information on this flyer and what is being asked of you, you may like to discuss it with a family member, another service user, or someone in your care team.

UCLP-Primrose: The research process

Would you be interested in an interview about your experience with this service in future? You don't have to answer now! Here is our study flyer to help you decide.

Hi there, I am the researcher! Do you have any questions? Let me know how, when and where you would want the interview to be.

If you give me your consent, I would like to ask you some questions about your experience with this service.
